In order to qualify for a graduate scholarship, applicants must: (1) have a minimum GPA of 3.0; (2) have earned no grades of "C" or below in any Economics graduate classes; (3) have completed at least 9 hours of Economics graduate coursework by the end of fall 2023 OR (4) be a UNT undergraduate who is entering the graduate program in summer/fall of 2024; AND intend to enroll as a full-time graduate student in the Master's program in Economics during fall 2024.

Scholarships are awarded on a competitive basis, depending on the availability of funds, based on a collection of criteria including, but not limited to: GPA; GRE scores (the GRE is strongly preferred over the GMAT); other academic accomplishments; evidence of leadership activities; participation in scholarly research; participation in community service and other relevant extra-curricular activities; and evidence that the applicant will complete his or her degree in a timely manner.

The first round of scholarship recipients will be notified by e-mail by the end of March. Some recipients will be recognized for their award at the University's Honors Day ceremony, IF such a ceremony occurs. If funds become available after the end of March, it is possible that additional scholarships will be awarded until all funds have been allocated. Scholarship funds will be dispersed during the fall semester of 2024.

Responses to the first seven (7) questions are REQUIRED. Question #8 is optional.

1. Explain why you chose economics as your major, what you intend to do with your degree once you finish the Master's program in Economics here at UNT, and what your long-run goals are.

2. Explain/describe your most notable academic accomplishments, achievements and awards over the past three years.

3. Explain/describe any hardships or adverse situations that you have experienced during your academic career, and explain how you overcame them.

4. List and explain any examples of leadership activities in which you have participated in the last three years. Provide dates where appropriate.

5. List and explain any examples of community service or other extra-curricular activities in which you have participated in the last three years. If you were a member of any club or organization and you held an office, be sure to list this.

6. List and describe any scholarly research that you have completed in the last three years. This would include any papers that you have written of projects that you worked on for any of your classes, or, possibly any projects that you worked on as a research assistant for a professor. Provide dates where appropriate.

7. The University places a high priority on students who complete their degrees "on time." In the case of Master's students who are not writing a thesis, the standard time to completion is two years. In the case of full-time Master's students who are writing a thesis, the standard time to completion is three years. If you intend to complete your degree "on time," explain/describe how you will accomplish this. In particular, indicate the year and semester in which you started (or will start) the Master's program in Economics AND the year and semester in which you intend to graduate. Then, list all classes that you have taken, and those that you intend to take, and their year and semester of completion (or expected completion). In addition, indicate the year and semester in which you have completed or intend to complete each of your comprehensive exams.

8. If you want to be considered for the Economics Alumni Advisory Council Scholars Scholarship (“AAC Scholarship”), submit a 500-word statement describing your past, current or intent for future student leadership at the University or surrounding community.
